

Dear FCC:

I can't believe you would allow Sinclair Broadcasting to air such a controversial documentary about a political candidate just before the election. This only confirms the public's grave concerns about media consolidation. A few stations would be one thing -- but for a broadcaster to influence great numbers of the public through their large number of affiliates is unconscionable.

If Sinclair airs Stolen Honor - hardly as thoughtful professionals - then it is only reasonable that they be required to air Up River as well in an equal time slot.

What do FCC licenses mean anyway? They used to mean a great deal. It is not the case today.
